1. Introduction:

EVE online is a space-based massively multiplayer online role-playing game developed and published by CCP Games. The game is highly community-driven, which means, every action made by a player, the game world will be affected the consequence of that action.

This study focuses on a product called PLEX, an important product that can be brought from real world money through the developers and can be used to trade for game subscription or in-game currency, ISK, through the in-game market. This study will investigate its sell order's price distribution and its relationship with geography.

The data used in this study is a snapshot of all the sell order of PLEX in all public stations in New Eden on 3/16/2020 at 3:30pm Eastern Daylight Time. Using this data, we will model the distribution of sell order base on its location, security status, price and quantity using various statistical methods and calculations.

1.1. Background

EVE online is set on a distant future in a star cluster known as New Eden, where a group of settlers was cut off from Earth and had to survive on their own. Thousands of years past and five empires were formed: The Amarr Empire, The Caldari State, The Gallente Federation, The Minmatar Republic and The Jovian Directorate (or Jove Empire). Although The Jove Empire has the most advanced technology, they closed their border due to a widespread psychological disorder. And so the four major empires gained control of four corners of New Eden, but were unable to control the outer rim of the star cluster.

Systems of New Eden can be divided into four classes of space through the security status system: High security space (High Sec), Low security space (Low Sec), Null security space (Null Sec), Wormhole Space (J-space). The security status system ranges designates a system with a number between 1.0 to -1.0, with 1.0 being the safest and -1.0 being the most dangerous. High Sec space is marked with a 1.0 to 0.5 security status. The four empires each controls a section of High Sec, with a police force known as CONCORD Assembly, or CONCORD in short. CONCORD acts deterrent to prevent players to commit “crime”, which is most cases involve killing other players without authorization. They cannot however does not prevent the crime from being committed in the first place, but can only punish the suspects by killing them. Low Sec is a region of space where the empires have legal sovereignty but no direct control over. This means that the CONCORD Assembly cannot help player when a crime is being committed. There are some restrictions on player vs player combat, but it is considered as a somewhat lawless region. Players can also swore allegiance to fight in the sovereignty for their respective empire in this area of space. Low Sec space is marked with a 0.4 to 0.1 security status. Null Sec resides in the outer reaches of New Eden, where the NPC Empires no influence over this region of space. Just like Low Sec, CONCORD Assembly cannot help players when they are under attack; furthermore, there are no restrictions on player vs player combat activity in this region of space. With great risk comes great reward, Null Security Space have some of the systems with the richest resources. Player Alliances are able to directly occupy and hold regions of space through diplomacy, trade, espionage and war. Null Sec space is marked with a 0.0 to -1.0 security status. Finally, J-space is referred a group of system behaves very differently from the other three classes of space. In the other three types of space, players are able to travel between system through stargates, from one system to the next until they reach their destination. In J-space, stargates does not exist. Players enter and exit J-space system through wormholes that must be scanned down through in-game mechanics. The connections of these wormholes changes every few hours, and must be scanned down each time in order to be used. Players can move into these systems for resources and but due to the nature of wormhole mechanics, player alliance tends to only occupy only one system per alliance and can only trade with other player groups by returning to the other three types of space. This type of space is marked with a -1.0 security status.

Players can trade their goods though station market, which is completely player driven and is not affect by the game developer in any way, other than tax. Majority of the trade are conducted in 5 system: Jita (Caldari), Amarr (Amarr), Dodixie (Gallente), Hek (Minmatar), and Rens (Minmatar), with the station Jita IV - Moon 4 - Caldari Navy Assembly Plant being the most popular. The empire-owned trading station in these have a 3.% to 5% brokers fee, depending on the in-game skill of the player. This encourages players to build their own structures for the intention of trading, one example is the Perimeter - Tranquility Trading Tower located one system next to Jita. Perimeter - Tranquility Trading Tower's broker's fee is set to 1%, this encourage players to trade there instead, while providing revenue to its owner alliance, Test Alliance Please Ignore.

2. Data

2.1. Market Share

We first look at the market share on the PLEX market for each region. The total quantity PLEX for sales for each region are graphed into bar graphs and the result is not incompletely unsurprising. The Forge holds most of the quantity of PLEX Sell order, with the market share of 80.255%, as shown in Figure 1.2. This is expected as two of the major trading center, 1.0 Perimeter - Tranquility Trading Tower and 0.9 Jita IV - Moon 4 - Caldari Navy Assembly Plant are located in that region, holding a respectively 69.79% and 10.10% of the market share.

After looking at the data from The Forge, there is some interesting finding that cannot be ignored. Lonetrek region holds the second most sell order of all of entire PLEX market. The region holds 3.65% of the market share, which makes up 18.49% market share, excluding the data from The Forge as shown in Figure 1. This is surprising because none of the major trade hub is located in Lontrek, but yet the region is able to rival the second and third most used region. Upon investigation, most of the trade conducted is in a player owned trade station known as 0.8 Sobaseki - Market & Cloning (EVEMogul). This phenomenon might be due to the fact that Lontrek is a highway region that connects the Northern parts of Null Sec with the rest of the empire controlled regions, as illustrated in Appendix 2. Sobaseki is also located right next to Jita, as seen in Appendix 3. The combination between these two factors allowed 0.8 Sobaseki - Market & Cloning (EVE Mogul) to be the third largest PLEX trading center in the star cluster at the time.

We then look at the statistics on the relationship between security status and quantity of PLEX for sale. As expected, the higher the security status of the system the more likely trades will occur. Not to mention, most of the major trade hubs are systems with some of the highest security status.

We then look at the quantity of sell order per region. As expected, The Forge has the most amount of sell order, however, the fact that Sinq Leison's number is able to have more Sell order than Lonetrek and Domain, as the Sinq Leison trade hub is less popular than the one in Jita and Domain. This could be due to the geographic advantage where Sinq Leison is connected to the border of the four other empires, as seen in Appendix 2. The Region also have the richest wealth generating PVE content in High Sec in the form of mission running, as some of the most popular NPC missions are located in the region. The results from counting the number of sell order on the each security status also agree with previous finding where merchants are more likely to sell PLEX in higher security.

2.2. Price distribution

The Price distribution of all sell order can be seen in Figure 6. and Figure 7., with the distribution of PLEX price is heavily sided on the lower end of the spectrum and exponentially decrease in quantity as the price gets higher. The basic statistics values can be found in Table 1. The distribution of price is most like to be due to the competitive nature of the market. The cheaper the product gets, the more likely the product will be sold. There is however a small drop in standing sell order in cheaper prices. This might be due to the fact that the data used is a snapshot of the standing sell order, and the cheaper sell order are sold too quickly to be recorded while the high price sell order will probably not be sold as easily.

2.3. Probability

We then look at the likelihood of an whether a sell order is certain class of system and a certain region. As usual, The probability of the order being in a The Forge is the highest while the probability of it being in a 0.9 security system is the highest. Data is listed in Table 2. The conditional probability of sell order being in a region given that it is in a certain security status and vice versa is listed in Appendix 4.

3. Conclusion

It is clear that the majority PLEX traded in New Eden is conducted in The Forge's two major trade hubs, however, there are also some popular locations that can be explained through geography. Meanwhile, the price of the item seems to be typical in a competition environment where majority of the price is set as the lowest acceptable rate to attract customers, some of the cheapest ones are being sold quickly. This study provides some insights into the effect of geography and sales of a product, while at the same time, showed some very interesting findings that showed some very interesting aspect of the game that was not noticed before. Although this study only uses data from one single snapshot in time, it provides valuable data that can be studied. Further studies can be studied if more of these snapshots are taken in different times.
